Numerical methods for networks of hyperbolic conservation laws

Raul Borsche
TU Kaiserslautern

Networks of hyperbolic conservation laws can be used to model gas pipelines, sewer networks or the human circulatory system. In this talk different numerical approaches for such networks will be discussed. These range from the classical Godunov method, central schemes up to high order methods. Additionally the coupling to ODE-models will be addressed.